Environmental Protection: The Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) has announced that it will be reviewing the use of leaded gasoline in the United States. The agency is concerned that the use of leaded gasoline may be contributing to the problem of lead poisoning in children. The agency is currently conducting research to determine the extent of the problem and is seeking input from the public. The agency is also considering the possibility of banning leaded gasoline in the United States.

Figure 1. A schematic diagram of the experimental setup. The subject is seated in a chair and views the target through a video camera. The target is a small object (e.g., a ball) that is suspended in the air. The subject's hand is positioned near the target. The video camera is positioned above the target and the subject's hand. The video camera is connected to a computer, which displays the video feed on a monitor. The subject is instructed to move their hand towards the target. The video camera captures the movement of the hand and the target. The computer processes the video feed and displays the target's position on the monitor. The subject is instructed to move their hand towards the target based on the video feedback.

The Recording Process  In a discussion on the long history of recording, Sound on Sound traces the evolution of the recording process from the early days of wax cylinders to the modern digital recording process. The book covers the technical aspects of recording, including the use of microphones, mixers, and recording software, as well as the creative aspects of recording, such as the use of reverb and other effects. The book is a comprehensive guide to the recording process, and is a must-read for anyone interested in the history of music.
